"Accordingly, the Parliamentary Assembly calls upon the Member States to implement, in conjunction with addressing the above issues, specific provisions for the protection of fundamental freedoms. The Parliamentary Assembly recalls that under the European Court of Human Rights' interpretation of the articles 9 and 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights, freedom of religion and freedom of expression (both in the public and private arenas, and including thought and conscience) are essential to the foundation of a democratic society, and are a means for establishing it. Moreover, such freedoms are vital elements which form individual identity. Freedom of expression applies not only to information and ideas that are favourably received or regarded as inoffensive or indifferent, but also to expressions that may offend, shock, or disturb the State or any sector of population. A democratic society demands pluralism, tolerance, and broadmindedness."
